The book consists of 12 chapters written by different authors, who are all members of Generation X and The United Methodist Church. According to the Introduction, "one thing that is lacking in recent books on Wesleyan renewal in the church, though: the voice of a younger generation. The book in your hands wants to fill that gap by casting a vision for the church’s future by United Methodists who fall into the Generation X category." Many United Methodist Christians wonder if their denominational body can be a viable force for good in the future. "Generation Rising" features a range of voices who all believe the UMC can regain vitality for the sake of God's kingdom on earth. They offer different solutions but no silver bullets to overcome every challenge the UMC faces. The book in your hands wants to fill that gap by casting a vision for the church's future by United Methodists who fall into the Generation X category. The topics addressed include: discipleship, Holy Communion, preaching, evangelism, small groups, missions, race, ecology, youth ministry, young adults, ordination and internet ministry.
