 MJ Gomez-Saavedra

Professor McGown

ENG 89

24 October 2018

Works Cited

Periodicals (Articles)

Accessed 24 Oct. 2018. The newest released Military Service Pensions Collection offers a unique opportunity to examine the role of women in the Irish Revolution from 1916 to 1923. This article explores the gender distribution of military pensions by state, their economic significance and their importance as a recognition of women's participation in Irish Independence.

Accessed 24 Oct. 2018. Among the many women involved in the Irish Revolution and the infamous Easter Rising, Mary Josephine 'Min' stood out. Min was a founder member of the Cumann na mBan in 1914 and was a very significant entity during the Easter Rising, as she carried messages to and from the GPO. Min was highly influential and gathered supporters in the US during 1916, this article talks about her involvement.

Prasch, Thomas. "Women's Lives, Nationalist Movements: Three Cases." ProQuest, search.proquest.com/docview/1300156941?pq-origsite=gscholar. Accessed 22 Oct. 2018. Excerpt originally published in Journal of Women's History, vol. 7, no. 1, Winter 1995, pp. 218-27. Three Cases: Maud Gonne, Constance Markievicz and Kitty O'Shea. These cases addresses the three women's involvement in the Irish Revolutionary Movement, even though none of them were actually Irish. The article talks about their associations to men (like Yeats and Parnell) or their lack there of (Countess Markievicz) and how they impacted their lives and in turn impacted the Irish Revolution.

Irish-American Cultural Institute. Project MUSE, muse.jhu.edu/article/176059. Accessed 22 Oct. 2018. Originally published in Éire-Ireland, vol. 39, no. 3&4, Fall-Winter 2004. This is an account of the participation of women in the 1916 Easter Rising, arguing that society often forgets how meaningful their participation was in the Irish Revolutionary Movement. Two women who famously fought in the Easter Rising, Constance Markievicz an Margaret Skinnider, put on a dramatization of gender difference that heightened the fears of both political sides which caused a great disturbance in Irish society.

Nonperiodicals (Books)

Callaghan, Mary Rose. Irish Political Women Series. London, Pandora Press, 1989. Primary Source. A biography on Katherine Parnell, known as Kitty O’Shea who is famously remembered for marrying to Charles Stewart Parnell and for having an affair with Parnell that led to the demise of his political career.

Londraville, Janis, and Richard Londraville, editors. Too Long a Sacrifice: The Letters of Maud Gonne and John Quinn. By Anna MacBride White, Selinsgrove: Susquehanna University Press, 1999. Primary Source. This collection is the exchange of letters between feminist and revolutionist, Maud Gonne and American lawyer John Quinn, as they discuss political and social conflicts leading up to and during the Irish revolution.
Matthews, Ann. Renegades: Irish Republican Women 1900-1922. Mercier Press, 2010, books.google.com/books?id=pzYkTYi3JRgC&pg=PA3&source=kp_read_button#v=one page&q&f=false. Accessed 24 Oct. 2018. A comprehensive account of the triumphs and tragedies of women living in the times of the Irish Civil War and the Irish Revolutionary Movement. It might come as a surprise to those who romanticized women roles in this period, but the truth is that women were more often than not abused during this period. The book also talks quite extensively about the separation of most revolutionary women between two parties: The Sinn Fein and the Cumann na mBan.

McCoole, Sinead, and Margaret Ward. No Ordinary Women: Irish Female Activists in the Revolutionary Years 1900 - 1923. Dublin, O'Brien Press, Google Books, books.google.com/books/about/No_Ordinary_Women.html?id=MWGTpfR3QN4C. Accessed 22 Oct. 2018. Primary Source. This book narrates the lives of sixty-five women activists during the Revolutionary Movement for Irish Independence. It depicts their fights for independence, the risks they took for their cause and includes memorabilia of their lives, including their prison journals and interviews with their families.

Steele, Karen, editor. Maud Gonne's Irish Nationalist Writings 1895-1946. Portland, OR, Irish Academic Press, 2004. Primary Source. Karen Steele's collection of Maud Gonne's political writings focuses on female activism during the movement for Irish Independence. The writings convey Gonne's political career: her family, the poor, the cause of Ireland, the literary revival and the failure of the Free State, and her dedication to political freedom and social justice.
Web sites, e-sources (Online Articles)

Lynch, Sheelagh. "Hidden Heroes of the Irish Revolution: Women in the Role of Ireland's Struggle for Independence 1900 – 1927." Digital file, 2014. Contrary to popular belief, the Irish fight for freedom has more to do with women than the public believes. Irish women fought and struggled in the Irish fight for freedom. While the split between Irish suffragists and Republicans slowed the progress of women into Irish society, it was actually the values instilled in the Catholic Church and those carried out by Eamon de Valera that prevented women from taking their place in the New Ireland.

Unpublished & other sources overlook women's suffrage as a lesser issue at the time, and she won't remain silent any longer.

--- "Speech to Women." National Literary Society, 1909, Dublin. Speech. Primary Source. This speech was delivered to the women of the National Literary Society in 1909. The speech was delivered during a time after Markievicz had retired from fighting in the front-lines and was taking a more relaxed role in the revolution. The Countess is trying to get women to join a suffrage movement so long as it also has an agenda for the freedom of their nation, as it wouldn't make sense to have a women-accepting nation in chaos.
A further 24,701 new coronavirus cases were reported on Thursday - but the Imperial College study randomly tests asymptomatic people to estimate the number of overall new infections. The region was also starting to see a fall in the number of 18-24 year olds catching the virus, along with Yorkshire and the Humber, although it is rising in older age groups in those areas. Prof Steven Riley, one of the authors, told BBC Radio 4’s Today programme the government may need to “think about changing the approach” in England.

Eight years ago, less than half of the graduates worked in their fields - according to the Higher School of Economics, it was only 49.6%. Five years later, the situation improved, though only slightly: in 2014, it was 53.3%. In February 2017, Professor Elena Varshavskaya from the Higher School of Economics published a new research about where and in what fields Russian highly qualified specialists work. According to this research, the percentage of those who do not knowledge gained during their university years in their work has decreased considerably, yet, they still amount to about one third.

English mathematician who made pioneering contributions to the area of the special functions, which is of particular interest in mathematical physics. Whittaker is best known work is in analysis, in particular numerical analysis, but he also worked on celestial mechanics and the history of applied mathematics and physics. He wrote papers on algebraic functions and automorphic functions. His results in partial differential equations (described as most sensational by Watson) included a general solution of the Laplace equation in three dimensions in a particular form and the solution of the wave equation.
In 2018, McGowan released her debut studio album, Planet 9, followed by a repackage in 2020. In August 2018, McGowan was announced to receive the Inspiration Award at the GQ Men Of The Year Awards. McGowan appears in the art film Indecision IV, which combines dance and gender issues. In an August 2011 interview, McGowan talked about her experience working on the film Rosewood Lane with director Victor Salva, who is a convicted child molester and child pornographer, stating, "I still don’t really understand the whole story or history there, and I’d rather not, because it's not really my business." Full-Time Community College Professor Salary. Community college professors typically teach general-education classes or provide training for a specific career. Full-time professors teach a minimum of 12 credit hours per semester and may add additional classes for a higher salary. In addition to extra classes, other... James has been writing business and finance related topics for work.chron, bizfluent.com, smallbusiness.chron.com and e-commerce websites since 2007. He graduated from Georgia Tech with a Bachelor of Mechanical Engineering and received an MBA from Columbia University. Semantic Scholar profile for A. McGown, with 11 highly influential citations and 5 scientific research papers. This paper studies designers at work in the early stages of design, concentrating on the visible sketching component of the design activity so that it might be understood and its efficiency subsequently improved by computer support.